SERA Official Promises Speedy Work on Airport

The following telegram from Harry L. Englebright, Congressman from this district carries good news for Nevada county and Mother Lode mining interest:

Washington D. C. April 21, 1934
Harley M. Leete,
Nevada City, Calif.,

I have just succeeded in securing an appropriation of $95,000 from the War Department for surveys, investigations and the preparation of detailed plans for the proposed construction of hydraulic mining dams for the resumption of hydraulic mining on the American and Bear rivers and at the narrows dam site on the Yuba river. Orders have been issued for the surveys and investigations to start immediately. The work is to be carried on by the Board of United States Army Engineers and the California Debris Commission. This is a reult of the resolution I obtained from the River and Harbors Committee of the House at last session of Congress, which called for a report as to the feasibility of hydraulic mining resumption. Public hearings were held in Sacramento during last summer. As you know this is the first occasion since the passage of the Caminetti act in 1893 that the federal government has interested itself to bring about active resumption of hydraulic mining and I am very happy indeed to have been able to accomplish this.

HARRY L. ENGLEBRIGHT, M. C.

CLUB WOMEN'S CLIMAX IS GAY GIPSY DINNER

Gay Romany scenes were enacted when 200 club women of the Northern District Convention gathered for their Gipsy Rondezvous last Friday evening in the National Hotel. The President, Mrs. W. R. Rider, presided.

Gay laughter sounded as the colorfully dressed throng gathered in the banquet room upstairs. When the banquet room doors were opened the quests began chanting and singing until all were seated. Then a group consisting of local members, Mesdames Belle Douglass, as a man, leading; R. E. Harris, Charles Elliott, Martin Van Berg, Agnes Taylor, W. L. Mobley, George Gildersleeve, Lyda Talbot, George Stine, and Miss Tonia Wyant, the last a troubadour, danced and sang about the big witch's cauldron, which had been arranged in the center of the room near an evergreen tree. Miss Wyant played her violin, while the others sang and waved tamborines. Mrs. Nedda Simons acted as District Witch. Gipsy forecasts were given by Mrs. Thomas Richards, District Seer, assisted by Mesdames W. R. Rider, J. V. Leithold, Frank Brock, S. Cohn, and H. E. Kjorlie.

UNDER A HARVEST MOON

The whole brilliant scene was lighted by a big harvest moon and tiny colored electric light globes which were entwined in an evergreen wreath down the center of the tables. Souvenirs of gold nuggets were presented the guests.

Fortunes were drawn from the big cauldron and read to the great enjoyment of all.

NEVADA CITY'S MASQUERADERS

There were some remarkably pretty and outstanding costumes. Almost all of the state and district officers were in Gipsy costume. Some of the members of the local club in notable costumes were Mesdames H. E. Kjorlie, R. Grant, Kittie Kimball, C. E. Bosworth, R. J. Bennetts, A. W. Hoge, R. L. P. Bigelow, Dick Bennett, Catherine Celio, Raglan Tuttle, C. Holland Ernest Schreiber, Emma Foley, W. L. Mobley, George Gildersleeve, Misses Minnie Brand, Winnie Mulloy, Gertrude Goyne Mrs. Gean McFayden, of Marysville, 84 years young, arrayed as a Gipsy man, brought forth peals of laughter, as did Mrs. George Calanan dressed as a bandit. Both were well sustained characters, and hardly any of her friends recognizing Mrs. Calanan.

GHOST CITIES

Herman C. Davis, of Sacramento, addressed the group on Ghost Cities of California and Nevada. He began with the covered wagons of early pioneers in '48 and '49. He stated California really has no ghost cities in comparison to Nevada with her desert climate where buildings are still well preserved and look like bleached skeletons. He dwelt at length on Virginia City and her many ups and downs in mining. It was first settled by the Mormons, in 1850. The town received it's name from Jim Finney, of Virginia, who was also called ole Virginny. Among prominent pioneers of the west connected with Virginia City his tory were Henry Comstock, J. McLaughlin, O'Reilly, in the 50's; D. O. Mills, Ralston, B. Sharon, in 1862; later in 1871 came James Mackay, James Fair, James Flood, Wm. O'Brien, Adolph Sutro, all connected very matreially with many big western enterprises after leaving this famous old city.

JUNIORS PICNIC

The Junior membership introduction was made next on the program by Mrs. J. L. Springs, there being 75 girls out of 283 members. An election of officers was held with Miss Carol Keene, of Sacramento, being re-elected as president.

In the afternoon session Mrs. Raglan Tuttle, of Nevada City, entertained with the reading of a Spanish romance in her most charming manner.

RESOLUTIONS

At the last day's session many important resolutions were adopted and action on other important matters taken.

The principal objective of the future is the improvement of conditions in the Women's Prison in Tehahapi to the end that it may be made self-supporting.

A resolution was passed to be sent to the state convention, for approval regarding migrating and alien labor and its control.

RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED

The following resolutions were adopted:

Whereas; The Northern District of the California Federation of Women's Clubs is assembled in its 32nd annual convention in Nevada City, April 19th to 21st. inclusive, and

Whereas; The delegates to the Convention has received much pleasure and inspiration from the program rendered and the hospitality of the Women's Civic Club of Nevada City, therefore,

Resolved: That our thanks and our appreciation be extended to our District President, Mrs. W. B. Rider, to her Board, to her program chairman and to all of her committees for a happy and successful convention; to the State President, Miss Seaman, for her inspiring message, to all speakers, musicians and entertainers, who contributed so delightfully to our pleasure and entertainment.

Resolved; That a special vote of thanks be given to Miss Brand, President, to her officers, her committees and all members of the hostess club for their untiring efforts toward making this convention an outstanding success; to the Elks for the use of their beautiful hall; to the officers of the Empress mines for an interesting and educational trip; to the press of Nevada City for cooperation and publicity; to the Juniors for their admirable program; to the citizens of this charming mountain city of history and gold, for opening their homes and their beautiful gardens, for donating their cars for the entertainment of our members, to traffic officers who safely conducted the tours; to each and every one who contributed to this most successful and profitable convention.

Signed: Mollie Moore, Olive Percy Davis, Florence A. Allen.

Whereas, Communists admit that they are fomenting agitation in fields and canneries, and, since much of the labor in these industries is migratory and alien, therefore be is resolved, that the Northern District Federation of Women's Clubs urge:

1. Employers to cooperate with the State Housing Commission in offering decent living conditions to their labor.

2. That insofar as returns from products justify, that employers pay a living wage to laborers.

3. That remedial legislation be sought at once to correct Federal statutes which at present hinder deportation of radical aliens and aliens who are in our country illegally.

4. That, universal finger printing and registration be inaugurated to assist in locating agitators, who masquerade under various names, and to assist in uncovering illegal aliens and criminals.

POLICEMAN ENDS LIFE IN HOTEL

Rae Godfrey, 39, of San Francisco police force, apparently committed suicide by shooting himself at 6 o'clock this morning in a bath room of the Bret Harte hotel in Grass Valley.

Sheriff G. R. Carter, Coroner A. M. Holmes and District Attorney Will Wright, are investigating the death. It is expected that an inquest will be held tomorrow.

TOGNARELLI FAMILY LEAVES FOR ITALY TODAY

Mr. and Mrs. John Tognarelli and daughter, Catherine, are leaving at midnight tonight from Colfax for New York where they will embark on a journey to Italy for several months stay in the hopes of benefitting his health. They expect to visit in Genoa with her father whom she visited last year, and where the altitude is about the same as Nevada City.

It is with regret that Mr. and Mrs. Tognarelli leave at this time as they purchased a lot in lower Broad St., last fall and had intended to start building a home there this spring. As soon as his health improves they will return. Mr. Tognarelli has resided here 21 years and his wife has been here 14 years. They have made many friends in their stay who will be happy to see them return.

In observance of the week, L. E. Sweeney, director of music, has planned two events of interest to all music lovers. First will be a concert by the high school band tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock from the balcony of the National hotel, and the other, an orchestral concert Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock at the high school, one part rendered by the grammar school orchestra and the other by the high school orchestra. Dr. Burkman's address will be a feature of this program.

VICTIM OF MINE ACCIDENT BURIED

The funeral of Gabriel Olsen, timberman, who was crushed in a fall of rock in the Murchie mine, early Saturday morning, was held from the Holmes Funeral Home this afternoon, with Rev. H. H. Buckner officiating.

Interment was made in Pine Grove cemetery. The Holmes Funeral Home had charge of funeral arrangements.

SCOUTMASTER LEADS IN SUTTER BUTTE HIKE

Scoutmaster Edd Addington and wife accompanied by Albert Pratti, junior assistant scoutmaster, and Joe Marriott, motored to Sutter City Sunday. Mrs. Addington visited relatives in Sutter City. A nephew of Mr. Addington accompanied the group on a hike to the top of the south Sutter Butte a distance of 2,350 feet. Clouds prevented them seeing any distance. They found a frozen rattlesnake and killed it. It rained nearly all the trip and they were soaking wet.

On their journey back they visited the oil well and saw men pulling up the drills. A piece of core from the well was brought home. The well is now down 4304 feet and they expect to strike oil in six weeks.

The Boy Scout code arrived last week and members will soon be practicing with it.

Representatives Of Four Counties Meet With Sierra Chamber

Chamber of Commerce representatives of Nevada City, Grass Valley, Plumas and Yuba counties, joined yesterday with the Sierra County Chamber of Commerce at Downieville in discussion of better roads for these counties.

James Nugent, Boyalton editor, presided as the president of the Sierra Chamber, assisted by Joseph Innes, of Sierra City, secretary. All told, the meeting was attended by about 150 persons.

Preceeding the business meeting a big chicken dinner was enjoyed at the St. Charles hotel, with the proprietor, Tony Lavezola, as mine host.

Nevada City was represented at the conclave by R. L. P. Bigelow, George H. Calanan, H. M. Leete, Councilman Karl Kopp, Mr. and Mrs. George Gildersleeve and Mr. and Mrs. E. J. N. Ott. Grass Valley turned out with a big delegation of business men, including Bert Chigwidden, president of the Grass Valley chamber, Jack L. Wolff, M. J. Brock, Judge Oscar Winburn, Ernest George, and C. E. Clinch.

Jack Wolff called upon for constructive remarks, advocated immediate action in taking out the kinks in the Nevada City-Downieville highway. He stated that he had counted the curves on the trip to Downieville and that there were 941 curves and less than a mile of straight highway. He stated that with little exaggeration it could be called "the road of a thousand curves," though he was not sure but that the "seasick highway" was a better name.

A resolution was introduced asking the endorsement of a new road to connect the Nevada City-Downieville highway with Marysville, via Dobbins and Woodleaf to be known as the Indian Valley cut-off. This would eliminate Camptonville junction for most travel between Marysville and Downieville.

After some discussion the resolution was referred to the highway committee of the Sierra county chamber.

R. L. P. Bigelow described the road work accomplished by the Forest Service in recent months and his plans for future construction. George Calanan stated that Nevada City was primarily interested in securing a straighter and a safer highway between the two cities.

Joseph McLaughlin, of Plumas county, reviewed the work accomplished by Plumas chamber of commerce in completing the Feather river highway, all but 18 miles of which is now completed.

All delegations pledged Sierra county their support in obtaining highway improvements.

Englebright Gets $95,000 For Debris Dam Surveys

Representative Miles of the new SERA Federal relief organization, was in Nevada City Friday and Saturday for the purpose of rushing to completion the work on the Nevada City Airport.

Mr. Miles appeared before a special meeting of the City Council Friday evening at which all members were present, as were also former Mayor Bennetts and J. L. Wolff, who made the first landing on the new field.

Mr. Miles assured the Council that this was one of the first projects he had visited, and that work on the airport would be resumed as quickly as possible.

It is planned to put 40 men to work, with the 60 tractor, probably by May first, or just as soon as the project has been approved.

It will be necessary to resubmit the entire project anew, as apparently there are no records, maps or information available on the project as first submitted. All maps, photographs, weekly reports and other data sent in by either Mr. F. M. Miller, the County Director, or by Edw. C. Uren, the Supervisor under CWA airport work, has been either lost or destroyed. Nor has it been possible to get anyone of authority on the ground since the work first started on January 15, notwithstanding repeated efforts to do so.

Had it not been for the interest taken in the field by Mr. J. L. Wolff and L. A. Perette, who have gone out of their way, not only to make landings here, but have given much practical information on airport requirements, Nevada City would have been seriously handicapped.

Mr. Miles states that under the new regulations the days of loafing on the job are past and that only those will be employed who are willing to give a fair day's work for a fair day's pay.

Headquarters for Northern California SERA are to be established in Sacramento and Mr. Miles assures the City Council that the new organization will keep in close touch with all projects.

EMIL DE PRATTI BORNE TO GRAVE

Emil De Prati, Civil War Veteran, aged 89 years, who passed away in the pay ward of the county hospital Friday morning, was buried from the Holmes Funeral Home Sunday. Rev. H. H. Buckner conducted the service and was assisted by the Veterans of Foreign Wars. The American Legion was represented with a firing squad at the grave.

Holmes Funeral Home had charge of funeral arrangements with interment being made in Pine Grove cemetery. American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars members were pall bearers.

NEVADA CITY SHOOTERS SCORE WELL IN TRACY

A group of Nevada City Skeet Shooters motored to Tracy Sunday and engaged in a contest with shooters in that city. Some good and unusual records were made.

Rolland Wright won first prize cup in C Class; George R. Carter, 2nd. place in C. Class. Howard Penrose made first place in D Class, a price of merchandise being given.

Elmer Durbin tied with a San Francisco shooter at 44x50. Shot another 25 and tied again 22x25 and on a third trial they tied again 22 x25. A coin was flipped and Durbin lost. The tie was in first place B. Class.

Mobley, after a poor morning shoot got "hot" and won a miss and out for prize money and merchandise.

MUCH TRAVELED LETTER AT LAST DELIVERED

CAMPTONVILLE, April 20.--Mrs. Rachel M. Labadie, proprietor of the Hotel Francis received a letter a few days ago which was mailed to her at Marysville in December 1930. The letter was addressed to her at Campville, California, and in as much as there is no such place in this state, but there is a Campville in Florida, the letter was forwarded to Florida. Campville is a small place, and the postmaster there evidently thought that the party to whom the letter was addressed might eventually come for it; he held it for a long time, and finally returned it to Marysville and to the writer, who then put it in another envelope and forwarded it to the original destination.

THRONGS VIEW LANDMARKS AND HISTORY PHOTOS

One of the delightful features of last week's convention of the Northern District of the California Federation of Club women, was the exhibition of a huge volume of historical photographs displayed in the lounge of the National Hotel.

This volume was compiled by Mrs. Frank Boyle, district chairman of the history and landmarks committeee. Mrs. Belle Douglass contributed most of the photographs of Nevada City and vicinity which appear in the display. A large number of people were much interested in this display, as it covers noted parks, pioneer buildings and homes, famous scenic features throughout the 22 counties comprised in the Northern California Federation.

QUEEN LIL MILL RUNS FULL TIME

The demand for custom milling in the vicinity of Nevada City has increased to the point where it has become necessary to operate the Queen Lil mill on a 24 hour basis, instead of 16 hous as formerly. The Queen Lil mill is operated primarily to handle ore from the West Mines Corporation properties, but the management, desiring to be of assistance to the smaller neighboring mines, handles custom milling whenever it can be done without interefering with their own production. Lots of ore have recently been milled from as widely separattd points as Oroville, Ophir, Rough and Ready, Bear River, and Garden Valley, in addition to various lots from Nevada City. The Queen Lil mill operates ten tamps, followed by a flotation unit and concentrating tables.

At the Hussey mine, the operating shaft has been sunk to a depth of 70 feet below the present stoping level, and drifting on the vein will soon be in progress. Stoping operations from the No. 1 level are continuing to yield a good grade of ore, which is being treated at the Queen Lil mill.

Plans are being formulated to inaugurate an extensive diamond drilling program at the Canada Hill mine, with the objective of further exploring the ground north of the present workings on the No. 19 level.

The above properties are operated by West Mines Corporation, of which Mr. O. McCraney is president and manager.

ELKS BOWLING TEAMS NEAR END OF TOURNEY

The Elks bowling teams are to bowl three more nights this week to complete their tournament and will then reorganize for another one.

The Hoge vs. Johnson teams played off their delayed game Friday evening, making three points and bowling over their heads.

The teams are showing just as much enthusiasm as ever many bowlers running up good scores. Some of the younger teams took many points from the older ones.

In the new tournament the bowlers are to be re-arranged to make the teams as near equal as possible.

Wirt's Red Plot Story Flattened Out by Investigators—Senate Votes for Extra 10 Per Cent Income Tax—Auto and Coal Troubles.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

DR. WILLIAM A. WIRT, the really eminent educator of Gary, Ind., told his story of a "red plot" to overthrow the government of the United States, so far as the Democratic majority of the house investigating committee permitted, and the general opinion throughout the country was that it was "not so hot." The Democrats declared it was utter bunk. The Republicans, who had hoped to find good political material in the affair, asserted that gag rule had been enforced.

Dr. W. A. Wirt

The revelation of the alleged scheme of the radicals, said Wirt, came to him at a dinner given by Miss Alice Barrows at a country house near Washington. The other guests were Robert Bruere, David C. Coyle, Miss Hildegarde Kneeland and Miss Mary Taylor, all, like the hostess, connected with the government, and Lawrence Todd, chief of the Tass, official Soviet government news agency in the United States. From their conversation, Wirt said, he gathered that men high in the councils of the administration were plotting the overthrow of the American social order and that they considered President Roosevelt as another Kerensky to be followed by another Stalin. The six men named by Wirt were Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace; Prof. Rexford Guy Tugwell, assistant secretary of agriculture and recognized head of the brain trust; Prof. Milburn L. Wilson, head of the subsistence homestead division of the Department of Interior; Dr. Robert Kohn, head of the housing division of the public works administration; Dr. Frederick Howe, consumers' counsel for the agricultural adjustment administration, and Henry T. Rainey, speaker of the house of representatives.

The most serious charges made by the gentleman from Indiana were directed at Professor Tugwell; but his basis for these, as for practically all of his story, was hearsay, second-hand information and vague statements by some of his fellow guests at the dinner. In that lay its weakness, though there are many serious-minded Americans who insist that there should be a real investigation of any government officials seeking to undermine the present form of government.

The committee, having heard Wirt, adjourned for some days with the intention of calling as witnesses those who attended the country house dinner. Some of them already had denied flatly or belittled the statements made by Writ.

LOTS of bickering resulted from the Wirt case, and in this some of the Democrats concerned did not make a good showing. Chairman Bulwinkle of the committee, for instance, asserted that Wirt was imprisoned at Gary during war times for pro-German activities, and this was indignantly denied by numerous persons who were in position to know its truth or falsity. Secretary of the Interior Ickes accused Doctor Wirt of having sought to obtain public works money for a "Fairyland" project in the Indiana dunes by which Doctor Wirt was to sell 2,000 front feet of dune land along Lake Michigan at $50 a foot, a total sale price of $100,000. The project was disapproved by the Public Works administration as "visionary and impractical," Mr. Ickes said.

Doctor Wirt issued a denial of Secretary Ickes' tale, explaining that he had no connection with the proposed project and that the company with which he was connected had held the land in question for 12 years to preserve it for park purposes.

Representative McGugin of Kansas, Republican member of the investigating committee, was "gagged" when he tried to make a speech on the case in the house, but managed to get it inserted in the Congressional Record. At the same time the Department of Justice was seeking to revive a five-year old matter in which McGugin appeared as a lawyer for Mrs. Barnett, wife of the wealthy Indian Jackson Barnett.

DESPITE the opposition of the house leaders and the doubt of its approval by the President, Senator Couzens persisted in his effort to put through his amendment to the tax bill calling for a flat 10 per cent increase in all income tax returns. Chairman Pat Harrison of the senate finance committee had approved it as an emergenccy measure and showed no disposition to reconsider.

When the Couzens amendment was first voted on in the senate it was defeated by the bare majority of 46 to 44, the Michigan senator changing his vote to the negative so as to move a reconsideration. He got busy among his fellow senators and was successful first in having the vote reconsidered and then in the measure's adoption by a vote of 43 to 36. It was certain the proposal would be firmly opposed when the revenue bill went into conference.

Under the Couzens proposal, a person subject to a normal tax of $100 on his 1934 income would pay $110.

Next day the senate adopted the La Follette estate taxes amendment to the bill, thus adding nearly $100,000,000 more to the tax load of the country. The amendment puts a tax of 1 per cent on estates of $40,000. This percentage is increased rapidly until 60 per cent is levied by the government upon estates of $10,000,000 and more. Under the present law, estates up to $50,000 are exempted from the tax.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S fishing trip on the Nourmahal ended with the arrival of the yacht at Miami. Friends advised against his landing, remembering the attempt on his life there two years ago, but he laughed at their fears. However, he and Secretary McIntyre drove directly from the pier to the train and the President was back in Washington on the next day.

General Johnson, Donald Richberg, Secretary McIntyre and some twenty White House correspondents and their wives narrowly escaped death as they were going from Coral Gables to meet the President at the water front. A big combination automobile trailer in which they were riding got across the railway tracks just in time to avoid by inches being struck by a speeding train.

JUST before he left Washington for Miami to meet the President and accompany him back to the Capital, General Johnson decreed a radical reorganization of the NRA along lines similar to those of the army. The most important part of this shakeup was the appointment of Lieut. Col. G. A. Lynch, an infantry officer of the regular army, as Johnson's right-hand man. Colonel Lynch, whom the administrator describes as "the most advanced thinker in the United States army," is given full jurisdiction over all matters not otherwise assigned. He has complete authority to approve codes, orders, amendments and other modifications, and may sign codes that do not require the signature of the President. The NRA administration no longer will be a one-man affair, and indeed, the ground is now laid for the retirement of General Johnson, which has been predicted for some time.

Col. G. A. Lynch

LABOR conditions in the Detroit area, mostly affecting the automobile industry, remained in chaotic condition, despite the partly successful efforts of government mediators. The strike at the plant of the Motor Products corporation, which had caused a shutdown of the factory of the Hudson Motor company, was settled when Edward P. McGrady, assistant to Gen. Hugh Johnson, laid before the strikers terms that had been accepted by the corporation. The workers agreed to the terms, which called for a 10 per cent increase in pay and arbitration of disputes over piece work pay rates. This enabled the Hudson plant to reopen.

The 1,700 employees of the Campbell, Wyant & Cannon foundry at Muskegon, Mich., struck. The concern makes castings for automobile builders. The 4,600 employees of the Nash Motor company still were on strike at Kenosha, Wis.

The Mechanics Educational Society of America, an organization of tool and die makers, had voted to strike unless executives of jobbing plants met their demands for a 20 per cent pay increase and 36-hour week.

There was a strike by 800 employees of the Detroit-Michigan Stove company who demanded a 20 per cent wage increase, and pickets attacked men who approached the plant to work.

Industrial plants in Connecticut were involved in numerous strikes and labor disputes. The attitude of the workers was expressed by John J. Egan, secretary of the Connecticut Federation of Labor, who said: "No company should declare any dividends until the 1929 wage level is restored."

ADMINISTRATOR JOHNSON'S order to the bituminous coal industry to put into effect a seven-hour day and new minimum wage rates was bitterly attacked by southern coal producers at a code revision hearing in Washington. Especially objectionable to the Alabama, Tennessee and Kentucky operators was the reduction in wage differentials accorded southern coal fields.

SAMUEL INSULL, fallen utilities magnate, is on his way home to be tried for his alleged misdoings in connection with the bankruptcy of his financial empire. Turned over to the American authorities by the Turkish government, he was taken from Istanbul by coastal steamer and train to Smyrna and there put aboard the American export liner Exilona. He is due to land in New York about May 20.

SECRETARY OF WAR DERN completed the formation of the committee which will investigate the army air corps and its tragic attempt to carry the air mails. Newton D. Baker war-time secretary of war, accepted the chairmanship of the committee which was declined by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh. The other civilians named to assist the military members are Dr. Karl Taylor Compton, president of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology; Dr. George W. Lewis, director of aeronautical research for the national advisory committee on aeronautics; Clarence D. Chamberlin, noted transatlantic flyer; Maj. James H. ("Jimmie") Doolittle, widely known flyer and aeronautical engineer, and Edgar S. Gorrell, president Stutz Motor Car company.

BEFORE the criminal court in Washington Bishop James Cannon, Jr., of the Methodist Church South, and Miss Ada L. Burroughs of Richmond, his aid in the anti Al Smith campaign of 1928, were finally arraigned to answer to charges of having violated the corrupt practices act. If convicted they would face a possible term of two years in prison or a fine of $10,000 or both. The specific charge is that only $17,300 of the $65,300 contribution made by Edwin C. Jameson of New York to the anti-Smith movement was reported by the anti-Smith Democrats' headquarters committee.

Bishop Cannon

It was indicated that the defense would contend that Miss Burroughs did not have to report the $48,000 in question, arguing that it was spent within the confines of Virginia by the state anti-Smith committee.

IF HENRY A. WALLACE has his way, Arthur W. Cutten, millionaire member of the Chicago wheat pit, will be barred from future trading on grain exchanges. The secretary of agriculture summoned Cutten to appear before the Grain Futures administration in Chicago on May 14 to answer charges of failing to report his trades, as required by the grain futures act, with making false reports, and with concealing his trades through false entries, dummy accounts and other collusive practices. The alleged offenses were committed in 1930 and 1931.

OFFICIALS of the Public Works administration were elated by a report received from the F. W. Dodge corporation which indicated a pronounced spring increase in job-creating building activity in which the federal public works program was a leading factor.

Reporting on the volume of contracts awarded in March for both publicly and privately financed building in the 37 states east of the Rocky mountains, the Dodge corporation informed the PWA that $179,163,000 of contracts were awarded last month compared with $96,716,000 in February. Publicly financed building accounted for $126,210,000 of the March total, and privately financed building for $52,953,000.

The $126,210,000 of publicly financed work contracted for last month is about five times the amount contracted for in March of 1933 and nearly three times the amount contracted in March of 1932, according to the report.

FRANK WALKER, chairman of the President's national emergency council, made announcement of the next step in the administration's recovery program, the financing of housing projects all over the country with federal funds. New homes are to be built; old homes are to be repaired, remodeled, spruced up. Mortgages are to be given on generous terms, with interest low and payment permitted over 10 and 20 years.

Frank Walker

All of the activities of the government related to housing—such as the subsistence homestead plan, the Home Owners' Loan corporation, the home loan bank board, the farm credit administration, the Department of Agriculture's program of new housing for farmers—are to be co-ordinated under a single authority.

There is both an emergency and a permanent program in the scheme, and the temporary program as contemplated will be a rousing campaign, with citizens, real estate men, building contractors, union leaders, and laborers all being exhorted to join in a patriotic movement toward the restoration of the still slumbering construction industry.

BECAUSE of reports that Colombia had hired 24 American aviators and was seeking to give contracts to 50 more through its consul general in New York, the Department of State issued a notice saying:

"The United States disapproves of American citizens taking service in the armed forces of any foreign government and, if Americans do so, it is on their sole responsibility and risk and they cannot look to their government for protection while in such services."

WILLIAM WALLACE McDOWELL of Butte, Mont., the new American minister to the Irish Free State, collapsed and died of heart disease during a banquet in his honor given by President Eamon De Valera in Dublin castle. Mr. McDowell was responding to congratulatory speeches when he fell back into his chair and expired almost instantly.

Optimism brought America into a dominating position in the world and it will keep us from going back."

Idioms Used to Build Up English Language

A savage tribe in Tierra del Fuego has a vocabulary of 30,000 words and are the only savages in the world so richly supplied. We might borrow a few and they'd never be missed. We thus appropriated "hooch" from the Alaska Indians and have much enjoyed using it; that is, using the word. Hooch is a phonetic joy. It has that wild and slightly vulgar sound that seems to fit a crude intoxicant. English-speaking peoples are quick to pick up words odd to the ears from their neighbors, giving them a twist that may make their utterance more or less comic. "Hoosegow," made over from the Spanish "huskado," provokes a laugh. The English in India soon appropriated "loot"; and "bulldoze" arose out of the swamps of Louisiana, where it was for long a neglected verb derived from the French. Other terms that spring into being in the underworld in time get fairly into good society by succeeding gradations and there are now in good standing some from the patois of the pirates of the Spanish Main.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Why Hospitals Use a Liquid Laxative

Hospitals and doctors have always used liquid laxatives. And the public is fast returning to laxatives in liquid form. Do you know the reasons?

The dose of a liquid laxative can be measured. The action can thus be regulated to suit individual need. It forms no habit; you need not take a "double dose" a day or two later. Nor will a mild liquid laxative irritate the kidneys.

The right dose of a liquid laxative brings a perfect movement, and there is no discomfort at the time, or after.

The wrong cathartic may often do more harm than good.

A properly prepared liquid laxative like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin brings safe relief from constipation. It gently helps the average person's bowels back to regularity. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is an approved liquid laxative which all druggists keep ready for use. It makes an ideal family laxative; effective for all ages, and may be given the youngest child. SYNOPSIS

At the close of the Mexican war, Robin Kershaw, with his bride, rode into northeastern California. Here he found an ideal valley for cattle raising. They christened it Eden Valley. Below Eden Valley is a less valuable tract which Kershaw's wife christens Forlorn Valley. Joel Hensley, a Texan, settles in the lower half of the valley. There is bad blood over fences and water for irrigation. Kershaw kills Hensley and the blood-feud is on. By 1917, Rance Kershaw, his son Owen, and daughter Lorry are all that remains of one clan. Nate Tichenor is the sole survivor on the Hensley side. He goes to help Lorry in her car and finds her father has died of heart disease. Silas Babson, Forlorn Valley banker, schemes to control the irrigation and hydro-electric possibilities of Eden Valley. He proposes to play Nate against Lorry, assuming that they are carrying on the old feud, in this way getting control of the key lands necessary to the project. Nate, however, has no intention of carrying on the feud. He tells Lorry that he and Owen Kershaw, Lorry's brother, met in France just before Owen was killed. They became buddies, and Nate promised that if he survived Owen he would look after Lorry as a brother might do.

The two days that followed Rance Kershaw's funeral were spent by Nate Tichenor at the Bar H headquarters, until his old superintendent, Rube Tenney, should arrive and, with his wife, assume the duty of looking after Lorry Kershaw's affairs and keeping her company. He spent those two days looking over his decayed estate and formulating plans for its restoration, but in the midst of these thoughts his mind constantly shuttled back to a consideration of Lorry Kershaw and her affairs. He did not know Silas Babson except by sight; hence, lacking knowledge of the man's character, he was at a loss to know why Babson had so suddenly turned on the Kershaws. Was it possible he had purchased the mortgage because he feared the holder of it might grant an extension? If so, then Babson desired it, not as an investment, but as a weapon. Nate decided finally to try a shot in the dark and halt Babson's operations before they had fairly started.

The inability to puzzle out a trail had always annoyed him; he knew, too, it must be annoying and harrassing Lorry Kershaw to a far greater extent.

She was a fine girl, and if he was going to be her neighbor he desired her friendship, not only for both their sakes but for the sake of all the Hensleys and Kershaws who had died with their boots on. He'd promised Owen Kershaw he'd wave the olive branch, if and when he should get back to Eden Valley. . . . What a fine-looking lad that Owen had been! . . . All man . . . unexpectedly sentimental. . . . Well, he'd been out of Eden Valley to a private school for a few years. . . . He'd been civilized.

"Yes, Owen," Tichenor soliloquized, "it is hard to accept too many favors from a traditional enemy. The suspicion, distrust, and dislike of a half century aren't to be eradicated in a day . . . and she did throw my check in the fire! Well, she has something I want and I'm willing to pay for it and pay heavily . . . . That cursed feud is dead and I'll not revive it with a lawsuit. Why rub into the girl the knowledge that I'm rolling in money while she's bankrupt?"

Forthwith he motored into Gold Run and telephoned to his attorney in San Francisco. "Tichenor speaking, Paddon. Listen carefully. Ranceford Kershaw is dead and has left a bankrupt estate to his sole heir, a daughter named Lorraine. But two years ago he gave a deed of gift to his daughter of those four thousand acres I spoke to you about—you have the legal description. Well, Lorraine Kershaw filed that deed of gift for record very recently, as I discovered when running down the title at the court house in Gold Run. The local bank holds thirty thousand dollars' worth of Rance Kershaw's notes, unsecured, overdue and with interest in default, and the president and controlling owner of that bank holds also an overdue first mortgage in the sum of two hundred and fifty thousand dollars, with a year's interest in default. In addition the Kershaw estate owes the Bar H Land and Cattle company more than three hundred thousand dollars. The bank and the banker are going to foreclose, but the Bar H isn't."

"Good news," the lawyer interjected, as Nate Tichenor paused for breath. "It would seem that the girl is not in a position to hold you up, so you ought to get that four thousand acres cheap."

"Precisely. But I'm not going to give her the opportunity to begin to think she can hold me up; there'll be no argument as to the price. I'm mailing my bank in San Francisco today a check in its favor for four hundred thousand dollars, with instructions to issue a certified check in favor of Lorraine Kershaw and send it over to your office. Meanwhile, prepare a deed from Lorraine Kershaw to the Mountain Valley Power company for that four thousand acres—"

"Why not do a little trading? Offer the girl twenty an acre and work up."

"Listen Paddon. You transact my legal business for me, but I do not need you for my general manager. That land is worth four hundred thousand dollars to me if I can get it without a fight and without leaving a bad taste in Lorry Kershaw's mouth. I can afford to pay for my fancies, I have a fancy for this four thousand acres, and I fancy it now! But I do not wish to be known in the premises, so do not come up yourself to close this deal. The girl would suspect collusion. Understand?"

"Aye, aye, sir."

The following afternoon a livery car from Gold Run arrived at the ranch, bearing Mr. Rube Tenney Mrs. Rube Tenney, and two little Tenneys, a boy and a girl. Mr. Tenney, in his younger days, had been a Hensley bodyguard, willing (albeit never called upon to do so) to kill a Kershaw out of loyalty to the bread he ate. He was riding under Nate Tichenor's father, and when the latter died was elevated to the position of ranch superintendent, which positnon he had held with credit and honor until Nate Tichenor had gone out of the cattle business. Rube Tenney was nearly fifty years old now, but active and still trustworthy. He greeted his old master as informally as if they had not seen each other since 1917.

"Well, I got your wire ordering me to report, Nate," Rube Tenney announced. "So I came a-runnin'."

Tichenor smiled. When the Bar H retirement had left Tenney without a job, Nate had financed his old superintendent in the lease of a ranch and a band of two thousand sheep. Sheep were and always had been repugnant to Rube Tenney, but he had worried along with the nuisances and even during those lean years had managed to make more than a living off them.

"You left a good man in charge of your sheep, I hope, Rube?"

"I sold 'em to a good man. My lease was expiring in October, an' after three bad feed years I reckoned I'd better quit before my sheep died o' starvation." He handed Nate a check. "There's the money you staked me to. I got a few thousand over an' above that. Thank God, the rest o' my life will be spent with decent, respectable cows."

"Now's a fine time to git back into the cattle business," Mr. Tenney went on. "Prices is advancin' but you can still stock up cheap."

"I'm not going back into the cattle business, Rube. But you are. You're to be riding boss of the Circle K—on the salary of a ranch superintendent."

"Ah! Closin' in on them Kershaws, eh?" Tenney grinned.

Patiently Nate proceeded to disillusion him, and while he was doing it the Tenney head wagged understandingly. "Never did figger you'd be able to keep up steam like the Hensleys," he declared. "That's your father's blood. Very well, son. I'm glad to have the job."

"Miss Kershaw knows all about you—knows I've sent for you. There's a Miss Bachman staying with her at present. Tell her I suggested she send Miss Bachman back to Valley Center in this rented car of yours."

He gazed long and affectionately after the departing Rube Tenney and his brood. "Old Faithful," he soliloquized. "He doesn't suspect I bought him out of the sheep business and took a loss to do it. But it's worth it to have him back on the job—to be free of worry about that Kershaw girl and her finances—and mine. Fine joke on Rube and me if she takes a notion to fire him—for a woman's reason!"

But in his heart he knew there was little chance of that. Lorry Kershaw was a girl one could trust to know the value of a good rider and a loyal employee. And Rube Tenney could fill the bill.

* * * * * * * *

When Silas Babson returned to Valley Center he brought with him three legal documents, all undated. One was a petition to the county board of supervisors for permission to form the Forlorn Valley Irrigation district; another was a formal application to the state water commission requesting the allocation to the Forlorn Valley Irrigation district of the flood or freshet water of Eden Valley creek; the third was the articles of incorporation of the district.

The attorneys he had consulted, Messrs. Brooks, Gagan and Brooks had agreed with him that, under the circumstances, his strategy was excellent, but had taken occasion to warn him that if Nate Tichenor and Lorraine Kershaw should decide to oppose his proposition seriously he would realize he had a fight on his hands before he got through with them.

"Under legislation recently enacted a state water commission has been appointed and this commission has control of the so-called unappropriated waters in all the streams in this state. There are, undoubtedly, billions of gallons of so-called unappropriated water in Eden Valley creek, and there is no doubt but that the state water commission will grant the petition of the Forlorn Valley Irrigation district for the allocation to it of these so-called unappropriated waters.

"As I understand your situation, if you can get your machinery in operation to enter a condemnation suit before Tichenor sells his dam site to this power company you suspect of having an interest in it, and before the Kershaw girl sells her lake site to the same power company, you will, by the filing of that suit, automatically ruin the aspirations of your competitor, and you may safely accept my assurance that you can win such a condemnation suit. However, what the proposed irrigation district will have to pay Tichenor and Miss Kershaw for these properties is, of course, a matter for a jury to decide. Your irrigation district will have to pay the price within thirty days or forfeit forever its right to acquire the lands."

Babson nodded his comprehension and the attorney continued: "Your first choice of an impounding dam is now owned by Tichenor and the lake site by Miss Kershaw. If these properties are sold to the power company, being a public service utility, cannot be disturbed in its possession by another smaller corporation. You understand that point clearly?"

Again Babson nodded.

"We will assume that this is exactly what will come to pass. You will understand that in the position the power company will occupy, it will not have to purchase or condemn any water rights from Tichenor and Miss Kershaw. The water will pass over their ranch lands just as it has been passing for centuries, and the power company will merely impound it just above the point where it normally goes to waste on barren lands which still lie in the public domain. The Department of the Interior, which has jurisdiction over the public domain, will doubtless make no objection to the impounding of water by the power company, but in the event that settlers should in the future file homesteads on the infertile lands just below the power company's dam, the power company will be forced to let such settlers on lands riparian to the old channel of the stream have their fair share of the water."

"That is a contingency which will never occur, Mr. Gagan. Those waste lands, even with irrigation, will never attract anybody."

"We will assume you have the correct viewpoint. We have already assumed that you will not be able to acquire the Tichenor dam site and the Kershaw lake site. Now, have you an alternative lake site? Unless you have, just hand us a check for the cost of this interview and forget your irrigation project."

Babson drew a sheet of paper toward him and made a rough sketch of Eden Valley and the surrounding country. "This portion of the valley, which is occupied by Tichenor and the Kershaw ranches, is usually referred to as the Pan," he explained. "This narrow canyon at the head of the Pan is known as the Handle. By cutting a canal through a pass in the hills on the western boundary of Forlorn Valley and installing our flood-gate there, the water can be led from this natural reservoir by easy gradient along the northern base of the hills that form the southern buttress of Forlorn Valley and separate it from Eden Valley. Thence laterals from this main canal will lead the water over some thirty thousand acres of Forlorn Valley. There is a 10 per cent slope."

"And your diversion dam would be in the public domain, eh? Have you sufficient political influence in Washington to induce the Department of the Interior to grant you permission to erect such a diversion dam, dig your main canal and impound your water in the public domain?"

Babson smiled. "I feel assured we can work that game through our local congressman and senator."

"Nathan Tichenor and Lorraine Kershaw," Gagan reminded him smilingly. "They own lands riparian to Eden Valley creek below the proposed diversion dam and may block your aspiration with the Department of Interior by claiming you are diverting water from riparian lands to non-riparian lands, to their signal loss and damage."

"But we will not divert their share of the water, Mr. Gagan. Our plan is to divert only that portion of the flood or waste waters allocated to us by the division of water rights, which is under the control of the state water commission."

"That will be fine, provided you can get away with it," the lawyer replied dryly. "My partners and I have considered this new law very carefully and it is our opinion that it is subject to successful attack, by an energetic and belligerent raparian owner, as unconstitutional."

"It's been on the statute books five years," Babson challenged. "Why hasn't it already been declared unconstitutional?"

"Probably because nobody has pressed the point. Lawyers who could be engaged to tackle such a tough fight are high-priced, and the men who would engage them usually cannot afford them. So the victims make the best of the situation and get along on the amount of water allocated to them by the state water commission."

"Tichenor and the Kershaw girl will not fight us," Babson declared confidently.

"Nevertheless, if they're smart, they'll fight you. From what you tell me, these people come of fighting stock."

"Well, suppose we lose," Babson countered. "The district can still get rid of them by condemning all their lands' water rights and buying them, can't it?"

"Yes, of course. But you'd still have the power company on the creek below you, clamoring for more water than they would then receive."

"Wouldn't the state water commission have to adjudicate the quarrel?"

Again Gagan smiled his enigmatic smile. "I suppose so. Still, with these two riparian owners eliminated by a condemnation suit, the issue would lie between you and the power company and if, as you seem to think, there is water enough for both, a compromise should not be difficult to reach."

"It's a chance I'll have to take," Babson answered doggedly, thinking of the mortgages his bank held on dry-farming lands in Forlorn Valley. Once he succeeded in getting surface irrigation on those lands their values would be stabilized—likewise the value of his bank's capital stock.

Having gorged himself with legal information on every angle of the situation that confronted him, he paid his bill and returned to Valley Center in great good humor. He had boiled the issue down to its essentials. The water would cost nothing save the expense of leading it to Forlorn Valley or, if Nate Tichenor and Lorry Kershaw should oppose him successfully, he would have to buy them out via the condemnation suit process. If his plans matured in advance of those of the power company he suspected of interest in the Eden Valley water, he was safe. If they didn't he would still not be ruined. And once safely out of the unpleasant situation in which he found himself, he cared not a fig should ruin overtake the district subsequently. He told himself it was high time he liquidated his various interests and retired on the income from his capital.

The bank was closed for the day when Babson reached Valley Center, so it was not until he sat down at his desk next morning that Mr. Henry Rookby was able to impart to him such news of local interest as had developed during Babson's absence.

"Rance Kershaw's dead," Rookby announced immediately. "Dropped dead of heart disease the day you left for San Francisco."

Oceans Contain Gold, Silver, Iron and Many Other Precious Elements

There is enough gold in the sea to give every man, woman and child in the world about $14,000 worth, with gold at $20 an ounce, if it were all removed and distributed equally. Such is the conclusion which might be drawn from the most recent estimates of the composition of sea water contained in the 1933 physical tables of the Smithsonian institution, says Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Each kilogram of sea water contains about forty-five millionths of one milligram of gold. The total ocean surface area is estimated at 365,500,000 square kilometers and the average depth at three kilometers. The seas therefore contain about 1,000,000,000 cubic kilometers of water with an estimated weight of one sextillion kilograms—a number represented by the figure one, followed by twenty-one ciphers. This would mean about 1,500,000,000,000 ounces of gold, or 700 ounces for each human being.

It is estimated the oceans contain silver 1,000 times greater than the amount of gold. Also there are vast stores of iron, manganese, phosporut, iodine, copper, barium, arsenic and zinc—all present in sea water in minute amounts along with such vastly more abundant elements as chlorine, sodium, magnesium, calcium and potassium.

It has been found that the cost of extracting the precious elements from sea water is vastly out of proportion to the returns. While it has been assumed that the amounts of the various elements found in the surface water also would be found throughout the sea, this is by no means certain, as there is reason to believe the amount decreases with depth.

The Name of Hapsburg

Hapsburg, or Habichtsburg, translated into English, is Hawk's castle. It was from Hawk's castle, the gloomy little mill-like fortress on the River Aar in Switzerland, that came the name of Hapsburg, a name borne by a family that ruled Austria for 636 years, or so long that scarcely anyone but the historian today recalls the name of their predecessors, the Habenbergs.—Chicago Tribune.

Remembered Lines

* * * * * *

"This week be kind to birds and beasts,"
Again I hear that cry;
And with a calm, determined air,
I dash out with a sigh,
To fondle dogs that snap at me
And meet geese eye to eye.

"Take not the life you cannot give,"
My mother said to me;
And taught me to be very kind
To butterfly and bee,
To toads and lizzards in the grass
And flying fish at sea.

"He liveth best who loveth best
All things, both great and small;
For the dear God who loveth us,
He made and loveth all."
My teacher read those lines to me—
His precepts I recall.

"No sparrow falls," the lady said,
"But that its maker sees;"
If that is so, then surely I
Can never harm kil-dees
Or larks and robins when they flit
About through stately trees.

Now do you think these words absurd?
And do I hear you say,
We can't adopt such rules as these
In this, our modern day?
And will you smile derisively
And go your sterner way?

Well, I'll forgive your mocking words
If for a week in every year
You will be kind to beasts and birds.

A. MERRIAM CONNER.

Cabbages and Kings

By CHRISTIAN ANDERSEN

Had a talk with Police Chief Robson about that accident hazzard at Main and Commercial. He informs me that Commercial street will be made into a one way street soon and that is a splendid idea.

I had made up my mind to tell you how it feels to be 50 years of age and broke. It was scheduled to be quite long but after it had been written and properly butchered, to meet the requirements of this column, it didn't seem to be worth while and it went into the stove. The gist of it seemed to be that it is not so bad and then there is a gambling chance that something may be made to happen to change matters and anyway we are happy.

Here is a stray thought about patriotism. Patriotism is akin to loyalty and they both are matters of the heart.

Each mining story has angles of it's own. Here is one I heard last week. A man was digging a tunnel about 600 feet long to crosscut the middle of an ancient channel. I reminded him that he would only have 85 feet of the channel on his own claim when he encountered the channel. "Well," he said, 'when I get there I will get permission to mine on the other fellow's property." Does not sound so good, does it? And that may be the reason for a lot of failures in the game.

FOSS GRAVEL MINE

Jim Allen and crew are still taking out rich gravel from the Foss claims on Bear river, east of Nevada City. Drifting and blocking continue. About a half mile of channel runs through the property. A good cleanup of coarse gold and nuggets was made recently. The mine is under lease to Muscardini and Allen, of Nevada City.

JUDGE OSCAR WINBURN SEEKS REELECTION

Oscar E. Winburn, justice of the peace of Grass Valley Township and Police Judge of Grass Valley city, will be a candidate at the election to be held this fall for a return to the same offices.

In making formal announcement of his candidacy, Judge Winburn says:

"It will doubtless come as a surprise to most of the citizens, to learn that when I was appointed Justice of the Peace of Grass Valley Township, I furnished and fitted out my court room at my own expense. I also pay the rent. I have never called upon the Board of Supervisors to contribute any money toward the expense of the court room. If elected, I will follow the same policy.

"I think that I can reasonably assert that I have contributed in no small degree toward enforcing the traffic laws on the streets and highways in the Township.

"I will make my campaign on my record in office, and I can promise to do the same conscientious work that I have done during my term which will soon come to a close."

Judge Winburn is 57 years of age; has been practicing law in California for twenty three years. He served for five years as Police Judge of the former city of Watts, a municipality of about 15,000 which wah recently annexed to Los Angeles city. For five years he acted as City Attorney for Watts, and for one year he acted as City Attorney for Lynwood, which is another Los Angeles suburb.

He represented the Watts city officials in the law suit entitled "Morgan vs. Gove, which was decided by the Supreme Court in April, 1929,—cancelling a grafting $445,000 sewer contract and saving the taxpayers over $125,000.

BULLION MINE

A good strike is reported in the Bullion mine, south of Grass Valley. In the bottom of a shallow winze on the 1500 foot or the lowest level in the mine. A strong ledge was encountered with values running between $35 and $40 per ton. Indications are that the vein is an extensive one, and this will play an important part in the development of the property.

SHERRIFF CARTER THROWS IN HAT FOR REELECTION

Based upon a faithful and fearless performance of duties, and a conscientous adherence to the tasks set before him during the past eight years, George R. Carter ask re-election to the office of Sheriff of Nevada County at the Primary Election to be held Tuesday, August 28, 1934. Official announcement of his candidacy for re-election appears in the Political Announcement column of this issue.

In 1926 George R. Carter, equipped with a previous peace officer service of four years, was elected to the office of Sheriff of Nevada County. In recognition of his capability he was re-elected to that office at the election of 1930, four years later. Now, believing himself as thoroughly versed in the activities of the office and that his past record of performance is commendable, return to the office is asked for a third term.

Besides being the most hazardous of county offices the post of Sheriff is of such nature as to demand a service of 24 hours daily. Since January 17, 1927, the official records of the county show that Sheriff Carter has made 746 arrests. These extend rom misdemeanor to murder charges. Fifty-one persons have been put in the county jail this year.

During his term in office, Carter, a student and expert of fingerprint and Bertillion identification, established an Identification Bureau in his office which is one of the most extensive for any county of similar size to Nevada County.

It was through this identification bureau that Sheriff Carter was enabled to identify and arrest Richard Carter, picked up here as a suspect after Los Angeles county officials had released him. Carter, incidentally, was found guilty and sentenced for the murder of his mother in Seattle, Washington. There are innumerable other instances wherein the ability of Sheriff Carter as a peace officer has brought about the arrest of dangerous criminals. Now every prisoner that is brought to the county jail is finger printed and also photographed and a compete record maintained. This has proved highly valuable in check-up of suspicious characters.

Sheriff George R. Carter is well nd widely known to practically every resident of Nevada County. A native of this county, he has spent the major portion of his time at his birthplace. He served with the United States Army during the World War and has the distinction of being presented with the medal for Bravery under fire.

On the merits of consistent attention to duties, wherein partiality has never been shown and the interests of citizen and taxpayer placed above all else, Sheriff Carter asks re-election at the coming election.

M. J. BROCK, CANDIDATE FOR COUNTY ASSESSOR

In this issue of The Nugget, appears the announcement of M. J. Brock, of Grass Valley, who will seek the office of County Assessor at the ensuing primary and regular elections.

Mr. Brock is a native of Grass Valley and has spent the greater part of his life in business and mining pursuits at his native city. For approximately 12 years he was a member of the City Council, serving as Mayor the greater portion of the time. His knowledge of public affairs is extensive.

In an interview given The Nugget, the applicant stated that he had no special platform of policy for announcement at this time, but would outline his views from time to time as the campaign progresses. His assurance was that, if elected, he would conduct the office of Assessor with fairness to all persons and interests and with efficiency.

NEW OWNERS FOR PLUMBAGO MINE

Articles of incorporation of the Plumbago-Eldorado Gold Mining Company, were filed last week. The new company has taken over the Plumbago and Eldorado properties in the Alleghany district from the Yuba Sierra Company.

Nearly $33,000 has been spent on the properties in the last few months. Both properties are fully equipped to mine with electrically driven machinery. Robert M. Bedford, is engineer in charge.

The combined holdings of the Plumbago are approximately 300 acres or two miles along one of the richest vein systems in the district. The mine is one of the oldest in that section, and has a past production record of $3,000,000.

A large amount of the gold in the mine was obtained from shallow workings, but operations have now extended to the 1000 foot level.

The Eldorado, located in 1880, is credited with a production of $325,000. The Plumbago-Eldorado property lies near the followin mines: Sixteen-to-One, production $9,000,000; Oriental, $2,000,000; Rainbow, $2200,000; Irelan, $300,000.

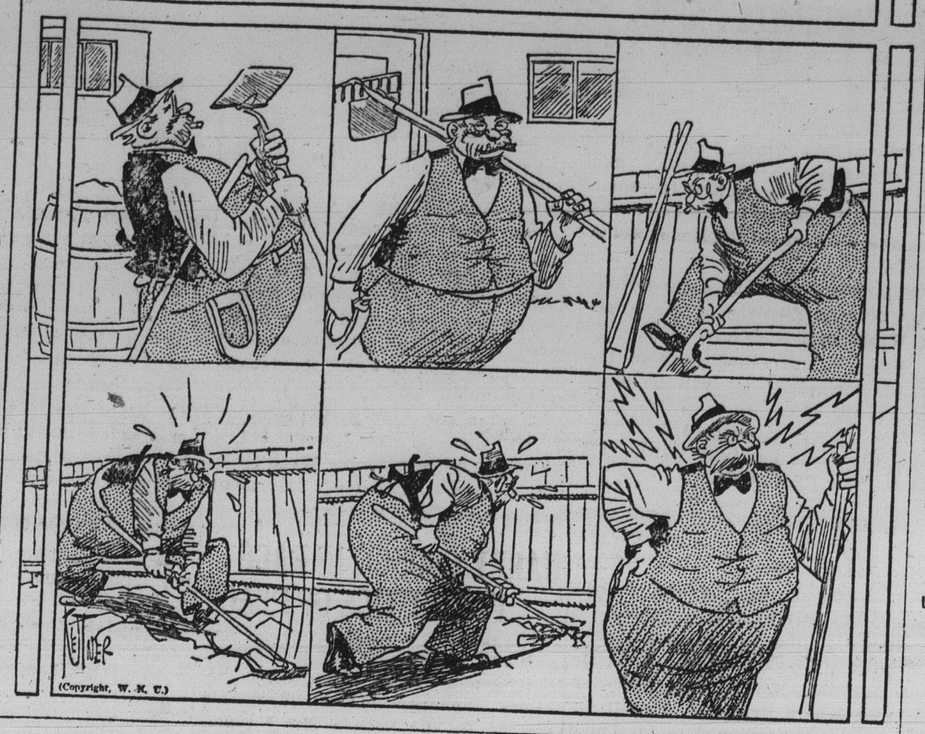
Our Pet Peeve—



On the Funny Side

DIDN'T WANT TO MISS IT

Sister—Freddy, don't you think you'd better go to bed now?

Little Brother—No, I want to stick around and see your friend explode first.

Sister's Boy Friend—Good gracious! Whatever can the child mean?

Little Brother—I heard Minnie tell mamma you were about ready to pop!

Right Size

McPherson was to be married.

"Ye'll be given' us a send-off?" he inquired of his best man.

"We will."

"With rice and white ribbons?"

"Aye."

"And old shoes thrown after us?"

"Oh, aye, of course."

"Well—I wear tens, an' Janet takes sixes."

To the Nth Degree

New Hospital Patient—Say, doctor, I asked that nurse to put a hot water bottle at my feet and she stuck up her nose and walked away.

Doctor—What else could you expect? That was the head nurse.

Patient—Oh, do they specialize that much? Then get me the foot nurse.—Capper's Weekly.

Not the Same Thing

"Darling," she murmured, and her voice was shaky, "how do I know that you really and truly love me?"

"My pet, I can prove it," he said. "Why, I can't sleep at nights for thinking of you."

"H'm," she muttered doubtfully, "that's no proof. Pa can't sleep at nights for thinking of you, but I hardly think it's love."

HER FAILING

"Does she follow the fashions closely?"

"Yes, but she never quite catches up."

Nrmerically Speaking

A little boy was balancing himself on his head when an old lady who knew him came by:

"Aren't you too young to do that?" she asked. "You're only six."

"It's all right, missis," replied the boy without losing his balance. "I'm nine while I'm upside down."

Awkward

The boss—Anybody call while I was out?

Office Boy—No, sir.

Boss—Gee! Then I'll have to go out again. I told Brown to call today and get his money.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Manysidedness

"Every story has two sides," said the fair-minded man.

"Yes," replied Senator Sorghum. "At least two. The number of sides a story has depends largely on how many political parties happen to be in the field."—Washington Star.

Anatomical Problem

"Bobbie, I am going to spank you as sure as anything," said Bobbie's mother.

"You can't. I'm sittin' on it," said Bobbie.—Chicago News.

CROSSING the ANDES

Laying the Trans-Andean Cable.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

THE Andes, rooftops of the Western hemisphere, have frequently stirred the imaginations of engineers. The building of early Spanish trails across these mountains was among the feats of colonial days; the Trans-Andean railroad was one of the outstanding engineering achievements of its time; and more recently the laying of the cable that links Argentina and Chile by voice added another chapter to engineering progress in South America.

Braving ice, accident and avalanches, North American and Chilean engineers, by sheer strength and persistence, dragged the heavy cable up and over the freezing, wind-swept mountain passes, blocked with drifts for months each year. Deep snow here causes frequent slides, or avalanches, before which even the stoutest poles are as wheat straw in a Kansas cyclone. So, to keep the cable from being swept away, workmen dug a ditch many miles long, over the higher Andean wastes, and buried the cable in it.

Near the tiny hamlet of Las Cuevas, on the Argentine side of the Andes, the line reaches a point 12,300 feet above sea level. By contrast, the submarine telegraph cable off the coast of Chile rests on sea bottom in 21,000 feet of water, showing the amazing physical geography in this part of the world.

Dangerous and difficult though these lonely Andean passes are, stubborn man has long used them in his restless transit across South America. Toiling on foot or shouting and stoning their lazy llama pack trains, native races of long ago traveled the worn trails that parallel the winding Aconcagua river, up ever-narrowing canyons, under cliffs, and along the edges of dizzy precipices.

In the glittering days of Spanish viceroys, when the king of Spain ruled much of South America through his agents at Santiago de Chile, pack trains and soldiers used these same Andean trails to reach Tucuman, Cordoba, and ancient Cuyo country.

Broke Off From Spain.

In these same bleak passes where the big cable now carries spoken words, once echoed the shouts of San Martin's famous "Army of the Andes," when Chile and the Argentine, more than a century ago, wrested independence from Spain.

For much of its length cable parallels the well-known "rack" railroad crossing the Andes. It took years to build this difficult railway, whose maximum grade is 8 per cent.

At Mendoza, on the Argentine side of the Andes, you leave the standard track and transfer to narrow-gauge coaches. For several hours a locomotive of the "adhesion" type draws the train. Finally when grades grow steeper, your engine crawls on the toothed rails of the "rack" system. As you climb slowly higher and higher, tunnels and snowsheds increase in number and length. Vegetation disappears.

To make this trip in June or July, which is midwinter there, is to see the Alps of South America in all their glistening glory. Sometimes snowplows precede your train. In July, 1930, scores of passengers were delayed many days at each end of the Trans-Andean line, waiting for 25-foot drifts to be cleared. Up in these passes resort hotels have risen, and holiday seekers come from Valparaiso, Santiago, Buenos Aires, and Montevideo for winter sports. One even sees soldiers training on skis.

Winding ever upward, the road runs in the shadow of Mount Tupungato, 21,550 feet high, and past an odd rock formation known as "The Penitents," from its resemblance to a procession of cowled monks. Then you stop at Puente del Inca, a strongely formed natural bridge which gives the district its name. Just beyond this bridge, if the day is clear, you can glimpse great Aconcagua, highest mountain in the Americas, whose snow-capped peak rubs the sky 23,080 feet above the sea.

Christ of the Andes.

At Las Cuevas the westbound train crawls into the mountain side from Argentina to emerge on Chilean soil. Over the hill through which this two-mile tunnel runs is laid the telephone cable; and, if the day be clear, just as your train emerges in Chilean sunshine you can look up at the hilltop and behold that famous peace monument, the Christ of the Andes, which stands more than 12,000 feet above sea level, on the Chile-Argentine frontier.

Far below, though still at 9,000 feet elevation, Inca Lake is set among the peaks. Still descending, your train creaks, squeals, and winds in and out among mountains of infinite majesty, dignity and distance, rattles over bridges that span roaring cascades, to emerge at last into fertile, green valleys of Chile.

In clean, safe, steam-heated trains, this is a fascinating trip. You may sit comfortably at lunch and look out through plate-glass windows at one of the world's most astounding panoramas. But you merely see it. The workers out there along the track, in skating caps, ear muffs and mittens—the engineers on snowshoes and the crew driving the rotary plow against the drifts—they not only see but they feel and smell the Andes.

And they hear the voices of the high passes, the hiss of the snow and shriek of winds around the crags, the roar of avalanches.

Down the smooth, steep, snow-covered slope of one mountain, plainly visible from the train, an avalanche slides. Countless tons of rock, dirt and snow, coasting straight down from the very clouds leaves a long, perpendicular scar. "What is that funny trail down the mountain side?" asks a solitaire player, looking up from his cards. No one answers.

To save their cable from these slides, the telephone engineers buried it in the rocks all the way from Las Cuevas, on the Argentine side, over to Juncal, in Chile.

Safety Comes First.

"When we picked out the route for laying our cable over the Andes, it was not with the view of keeping close to roads and trails," said an official of the American-owned telephone and telegraph company. "What we sought was a path that would give the cable the most shelter and minimize the danger of breaks from avalanches, landslides or earthquakes.

"But always we had to carry the heavy cable on the last lap of its hard journey up steep mountains and over cliffs, to where we had blasted a sunken way for it. Only picked men could stand this tremendous physical ordeal. We chose only those who had worked for years in high altitudes. Even the blasting and digging of our cable's underground path over this roof of the world, a ditch many miles long, was a back-breaking task."

Once the Andes separated Chile and the Argentine not only physically and in a commercial way, but also formed a barrier against intellectual, social and artistic relations. Now, by this cable, friendly intercourse is easy; and not only can Santiago talk over the Andes and across the far pampas to busy Buenos Aires, but by a 66-mile cable under the great River Platte she can talk to Montevideo, in Uruguay, and from there on by radio telephone to Europe, the British Isles, and the United States.

When the Airplane Survey party, which was sent to South America in 1930 by the National Geographic society, reached Santiago de Chile, one of its members called the society's headquarters in Washington, D. C.

Over thousands of miles of sea, jungle, plains and Andean snows this long-distance dialogue was held as easily as if the speakers had been face to face.

What a contrast since doughty old Tupac Yupanqui, the Inca warrior, braved these Andean passes! Probably it often took him weeks to get his runners through. Now, when the passes are free of dangerous storm clouds and fogs, planes fly every week between Santiago and Mendoza.

The Andes are as high, cold and vast as ever. Only they seem less so now because trains and planes are faster than mules and llamas, and because our voices on the new telephone cable carry farther than the voices of General San Martin and old Chief Tupac Yupanqui shouting across the canyons.

Weather Affected by Changes in Sun's Heat

Keep an eye on the sky when old Sol is in one of his hot spells, for the hotter he shines, the Smithsonian institution has found; the faster is the mixing of hot and cold air that breeds most of our weather.

The discovery, furnishing a new slant on how changes in the sun's heat affects weather, is based on studies showing that when the sun gets hotter the light air masses over the earth get lighter, and the heavy ones get heavier. That is another way of saying there are changes in atmospheric pressure, which speed up the atmosphere's circulation.

The discovery was made by H. H. Clayton, collaborator of the institution, as a result of ten years of comparing measured changes in the sun's heat and changes in atmospheric pressure over a large part of the earth. The changes are not noticeable by the average person on earth.

When the sun gets hotter, Clayton found, it apparently has the effect of widening a great belt of low atmospheric pressure that runs along the equator. At the same time the high pressure regions in the temperate zones also increase and move toward the poles. This stimulates the exchange of warm tropic air and cold polar air that manufactures storms.

This may mean, incidentally, that weather-breeding will be less active on earth for the next two years, at least as far as the sun's effect is concerned, for Dr. Charles G. Abbot of the Smithsonian recently predicted two years of cooler temperatures on the sun, on the basis of twenty years of study of its cycles of heat.

"Two things I wanted-

"...and it was all so simple when I found out my trouble. My physician said I had no organic disease, but I did have what is so commonly and truthfully called a low percentage of hemo-glo-bin in the blood.
"The reasonableness of one of the S.S.S. ads caused me to think that S.S.S. Tonic was just what I needed for my let-down feeling, pimply skin and low resistance. I wanted more strength and a clear skin.
"It didn't take S.S.S. very long to get my blood back up to normal—and as my strength and energy returned my skin cleared up."
If your condition suggests a tonic of this kind, try S.S.S. It is not just a so-called tonic but a tonic specially designed to stimulate gastric secretions, and also having the mineral elements so very, very necessary in rebuilding the oxygen-carrying hemo-glo-bin of the blood.
S.S.S. value has been proven by generations of use, as well as by modern scientific appraisal. Sold by all drug stores...in two convenient sizes...the larger is more economical.

Evangeline Chapter Enjoys Educational Program

There was a meeting of Evangeline Chapter, O. E. S., Tuesday evening, at which time Mrs. Lena Ghidotti Weeks was initiated into the order.

After the meeting, an educational program was rendered. Exhibits of grammar school pupils were viewed, this being in honor of Educational Week. Washington grammar school pupils gave one of the best exhibits of art work that was ever given in Nevada City.

A few outstanding ones were an apple orchard in blossom by third graders; frog friezes and scenes by second graders; map of the United States by seventh graders. The states being of colored cardboard with booklets under them giving their complete history of each. Besides there were pressed wild flowers, compoositions by first grade; artistic drawings and sewing by fifth and sixth grades; fifth grade health books and maps of California; also good exhibits of manual training articles by fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth grades.

Several short speeches were made, one being by Miss Gordon, grand Electra, of the State of Nevada. Refreshments were served.

MCCORMACK IN RACE TO SUCCEED SELF AS CLERK

Noble McCormack, county clerk and auditor, in this issue of the Nevada City Nugget, announces his candidacy for re-election to the office he holds.

Previous to his term, he served as deputy under his uncle, the late George Coughlan, who held the office for six conservative terms.

McCormack has thus practically grown up in the office. It is safe to say that no man is better informed as to the financial affairs of the county than he. As Auditor, he is the county's bookkeeper, and every cent of money paid into the treasury has to go through his office in the form of a "pay in" and when it is paid out the warrant must bear his signature.

The budget system is something that has been provided for by law in the past few years, and its preparation for Nevada county has been under his direct supervision. The other county officers have sought his advice and ahsistance in the preparation of this document to the end that it may be correctly prepared before submission to the board.

It is in the County Auditor's office that taxes are calculated and entered on the tax rolls after they have been submitted to the Board of Supervisors, equalized by them, and the tax rate determined.

Another duty of the office held by McCormack, is that of acting as Clerk of the Board of Supervisors. That body find him an invaluable source of assistance and advice in their work of handling county affairs.

Clerk of the Superior Court is another duty the law entails upon the County Clerk, and this work is always performed accurately and to the entire satisfaction of bench and bar.

Last, but not least, he is the official registrar of voters, has charge of distributing sample ballots and election literature, and has general supervision of the conduct of all elections.

Few men have ever asked the support of the electorate of Nevada county with better qualifications for its performance and a record of which any man might well be proud.

PLAZA GROCERY, SPICK AND SPAN, REMODELED, PLEASES ITS PATRONS

With floor space practically doubled, walls and ceiling covered with a coat of shining white paint, the Plaza Grocery now presents a spacious and attractive charm that every shopper, especially among the women folks, enjoys.

Conveniently arranged on low shelves and tables are one of the best and most complete stocks of groceries and household articles in Nevada county. For quick and easy service the modernized arrangement lends every facility, and patrons of the Plaza has been quick to voice their appreciation.

The changes were wrought while the Plaza staff continued its usual duties day after day. The problem of letting in more light and expanding the floor space was largely accomplished by tearing out a partition between the old display room and a store room in the rear. Reducing the height of the shelving until every variety of goods was easily reached and rearranging the goods so that those most in demand were easiest of access, were the chief changes made. The window displays are now only the foreground of a tasteful storewide display. Chester Scheemer and Miss Alice Langman, partners in the Plaza Grocery, are frequently congratulated by their many patrons and friends on the improvement they have made in the store.
